Driving Question:

How does film media influence the interpretation of the world around us and communicate thoughts and ideas to its intended audience?

Course Description:

In Media Studies this term we will be viewing movies that have historical real life relevance. We will investigate and research how racial, cultural, socio-economic or religious conflicts have affected society and people's beliefs and attitudes in the given movie. Setting, plot, characters, resolution and conflict are some of the aspects we will be discussing as we go through each movie. Students will usually have a pre and post movie assignment to do that allows them to fully appreciate the context of the movie. Also discussion of current world events and how it relates to the given movie will be a component of this complimentary.
